

Daniel Domscheit-Berg

Technology Activist, One of the Founders of OpenLeaks

CSA CELEBRITY SPEAKERS

Daniel Domscheit-Berg is a German activist and IT security expert. He helped build the WikiLeaks platform from late 2007 to September 2010 and acted as its spokesperson under the pseudonym Daniel Schmitt. He quit WikiLeaks over disputes about its strategic orientation, lack of transparency and management style.

In detail

Before WikiLeaks, Daniel worked for various fortune 500 companies, mainly building enterprise-scale wireless and wired networks for the automotive and transport industries. A network security expert by trade, he is an advocate for transparency and freedom of speech by heart, deeply caring for equal access to knowledge and information in a globalised world. In 2011, Daniel was named by Foreign Policy magazine in its FP Top 100 Global Thinkers. He is involved with various internet projects related to privacy and anonymity and furthering the decentralisation of the Internet's infrastructure. In 2017 he founded the "Verstehbahnhof", an open workshop and makerspace for the up and coming in Brandenburg's countryside.

What he offers you

Daniel Domscheit-Berg has spoken and debated on future chances as well as risks in a digitised and networked world in a multitude of both national and international conferences and fora, spanning a broad range from universities via commercial venues to the World Economic Forum. He is regularly present in national and international media on said topics.
